

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS AT THE NEW SCHOOL, NEW YORK CITY

PRODUCING GLOBAL LEADERS FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

Our curriculum at the Julien J. Studley Graduate Programs in International Affairs at The New School meshes theory, policy and practice, to prepare you for a career that contributes to building a more just world, and features:

- A Critical and Global Perspective - Develop independent thinking, challenge conventional paradigms, and construct alternative frameworks that confront prejudices and inequalities.
- Transdisciplinary Social Research - Draw on courses and faculty expertise in the social sciences, humanities, media, arts, architecture, and design.
- Engaged, Field-Based Learning - Gain experience in our practice curriculum, including practicums, United Nations Summer Study, and the International Field Programs.
- Flexibility and Customization - Tailor your degree to your interests and goals through part-time or full-time study, and select among research and practice-based capstones.
- Diverse Community - More than half of our faculty and a third of our students come from outside the United States, bringing diverse global perspectives into the classroom.

Learn more about the International Affairs community at The New School by visiting our blog: blogs.newschoo.edu/international-affairs.

APPLICATIONS
OPEN!

CHOOSE FROM TWO DEGREE OPTIONS

Master of Arts

- 42 credits
- No professional experience required
- Choose from five concentrations: Development, Cities & Social Justice, Governance & Rights, Media & Culture, and Conflict & Security

Master of Science

- 30 credits (can be completed in 12 months)
- 3 years experience required
- Flexible modules that cultivate a unique combination of substantive knowledge and practical tools

START YOUR CAREER BEFORE YOU GRADUATE

Take full advantage of New York City's extraordinary range of NGOs, intergovernmental institutions, and global companies for student research, internships, and practicums. Make connections with more than 1,600 International Affairs alumni working around the world in public, private, non-profit, and academic organizations. Get the knowledge, skills, and opportunities for practical experience and start building a professional network.

For more information, visit newschoo.edu/international-affairs.